CHINESE LAW. WE some time since suggested that the experiment be tried of permitting foreigners to place themselves under Chinese law, pure and simple, in non-Consular localities, with of course the proviso that their governments would interfere in cases of injustice just as they would interfere in European states. The idea—Utopian enough it may be in its bare outline, but susceptible we firmly believe of practical development—has attracted some notice in other quarters, and we observe with pleasure that suggestions tending to the same end have of late appeared in the columns of North China contemporaries. The great drawback-in fact, the sole reason why the British Government insists upon practical exterritoriality as regards its subjects in China-is that the Chinese law founded upon the penal code outrages our sense of justice, even when carried out in the strictest accordance with its provisions, and no European would be found to submit to what the native mind is accustomed to regard as justifiable severity. Hence the impossibity of the scheme we suggest being carried out until some modification takes place in the code of law. The real question hinger upon this possibility of inducing the Chinese, by force or persuasion, to so far make their principles of judicial admipowers, as to permit of their being applied to Europeans who render themselves amenable to prosecution. We observe that a suggestion has been made by a correspondent of the Supreme Court and Consular Gazette, which, if it were practicable, would be an admirable step towards the desired result. He says :-

"I am very anxious that you should advocate in your influential paper the expediency at some future time of all foreigners in China being made amenable to one law. would propose the Code Napoleon as the most comprehensive and complete: first that it should be administered at every port what you will - should be stationed and that an appeal should lie from this Court. on the motion of the resident official, to the High Authorities at Pekin. The several Taoutais would, it is of course supposed, before being nominated to an appointment. Though causes or cases in which foreigners alone were concerned, were still to be tried at Shanghai, the main difficulties of exterritorial jurisdiction would vanish; the necessity of expensive Consular establishments at the var.ous ports would cease; the strong hand of the Law would be with difficulty avoided by the evil door; and there would be reason to expect an impartial administration of justice. I offer the foregoing as little more than suggestions. * * * The influence of the foreign Custom's employes and non-judicial Consular Officers should prove ample to prevent any serious wrong being done the foreigner at a port, and a sense of responsibility, it is to be hoped, might lead the native official to take more impartial views of matters than the present system."

The Gazette says that it believes the subject "has long been under the anxious consideration of the British Minister," to which we can only add the expression of our sincere hope that action is contemplated. It is an undoubted fact that ideas connected with progress in China which at the time of utterance seem "Bombay, 3 days sight, Rs. 238 ) Utopian, eventually become facts either in whole or in part by persistent ventilation and discussion. It is possible that the one under notice may afford a fresh illustration of the statement.

(Recorder.) In the last number of Notes and Querie a fact is mentioned which may be of some importance in regard to the future relations of foreigners with China, so far as they are influenced by those superstitions which i is supposed act as an insuperable barrier to the introduction of improvements into this Empire. It appears that the Fung Shui superstition is denounced in Yung Cheng's "Sacred Edict" as among the impostures and false doctrines, the practice of which is subject by law to the penalty of death. This fact is new, and in a great measure startling, to those who have been in the habit of regarding the doctrine as one so engrayen in the minds of the people, and so thoroughly believed in by them, that it is impossible to introduce any change that might interfere with their ideas on the subject. It now seems that so far from this being the case, the doctrines of Fung Shui are recognized even by the Chinese themselves as impostures, and that in consequeuce of their pernicious tendency, they are made the subject of punishment. Like most other laws in China this doubtless has become from the supineness of the officials. in a great measure valueless, and is violated openly in many directions. The liberal ideas of Europeans are scarcely consonant wi h persecution of any kind; but notwith-B anding this, we believe many must feel a certain sympathy with an edict against a money. Free discussion, the spread knowledge, the cultivation of science are in European countries the safest antidote can at first be got at is by their being denounced at head quarters.

ro; eans in reference to this matter is that we have now distinct proof that the ideas. as to the impossibility of overcoming this surperstition are at least exaggerated, not in a great degree unfounded. The Uhinese authorities are probably as little able to make any progress in overcoming this abuse as in suppressing any other of the numerous delinquencies which are openly practiced in defiance of the Laws. But if pressure were brought to bear upon them. they would probably be able to exercise quire influence enough to prevent the Funo Shul doctrine interfering with any scheme of improvement, they were really desirous

Nach § 18 des Flaggengesetzes genügen die bisher von den einzelnen Landesbehörden ertheilten Certificate auch zur Führung der Bundesflagge. Alle nur mit interimistischen Consular-Certificaten versehenen norddeutschen Schiffe haben indessen sofort ihre Eintragung in der Heimath zu bewirken. Königlich Preussisches General Consulat, TETTENBORN.
